Segment.01 Hello. I'm Jerry Scheidbach, pastor of the Lighthouse, [Bible Thump Alert] He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh...

Get ready for your Brain Massage!

[TRUTH]

There's this song titled "Thunder is the Sound of God Laughing"
— so, when you hear this — you understand!

Watch, "Trump cancels CPAC at Last Minute" [Thunder]

He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh—the Lord shall have them in derision. Hey, I realize we are rolling on past Super Tuesday and focused on the last Debate—but trust me, I've got some analysis of Super Tuesday you are going to want to hear—then we'll take a look at Thursday's debate.

Super Tuesday sorted some things out! The early primaries and caucuses are like the horses in the gates pawing and anxious to break out, gates open, and they clamor out onto the track jostling for position, and Super Tuesday is like when the horses settle into position for the first turn—Trump is still out front, but not nearly so far out there as the democrats voting for him hoped, with Cruz in a strong position to catch him, Rubio barely holding on while Kassich is fading fast, and Carson walking off the track—and I trust he will walk off with his honor intact for I would certainly like to seem him active in the next administration—Surgeon General? Really, a number of Cabinet positions would suit him.

I liked him for VP a while back, and that's still a possibility, I think; but it looks like it'll go to Rubio—personally, I'm not real thrilled about that, but it would be something I could live with. It reminds me of the day Reagan announced G.H. Bush as his running mate—if I remember correctly, I was sitting in my car with a friend and we were talking while listening to the announcement, and as soon as he named Bush, I said, that he would undo whatever Reagan did but we can hope for at least 8 years—turned out Bush 1 did a better job than I expected, but he did not carry on the Reagan revolution in earnest—backed up on some important areas and we ended up losing it to Clinton.

Okay, I'm going to offer an in depth analysis of Super Tuesday results.

First, the raw numbers in the delegate count. Remember that the GOP candidate needs 1,237 delegates to take the nomination. So, with Trump in the lead with 319 delegates, you can see we have a lot of track ahead of us before anyone can call this race. Especially with Cruz coming up on his rear with 226 delegates, less than 100 delegates behind Trump.

Rubio has 110, and so he is 209 delegates behind Trump, and 116 delegates behind Cruz — so that pretty much makes it a Trump vs. Cruz race.

Kassich is basically out of the running with only 25 delegates, but apparently, he insists on hanging on through Ohio. Risky! If he loses his own State, that could do some permanent damage. And Carson, as you have heard by now, has walked off the track. Or has he? It's interesting what you get to know about these guys during their trial of fire called the primaries. I would never have expected Carson to be so — well, equivocating, almost crawfishing in his actions of late. Not moving straight forward, but moving sideways

— he was done when it became apparent he had no clue when it came to foreign policy issues — okay, so he was not ready for the office of President, I said that about Carson from day one — but I did not know he would have so much emotional difficulty with losing that he could not man up to the cause for Constitutional Conservatism, concede, and give his support to the conservative that most closely shares his vision for America, which would be Cruz. And I don't want to consume my limited time with sorting out what happened between him and Cruz, I've already addressed that and nailed it. The idea that Cruz "Lynched" Carson is theatre of the absurd. The dark prince of the air set that one up!

Perhaps the reason Carson has not simply stated in a straight forward way that he is done is because he wants to make his point with his CPAC address — remember, I'm putting this together on Friday am and so he has not given his speech yet. I expect him to formally withdraw from the race at CPAC, or to announce a determination to continue on leading his "movement" to keep their "message" before the people—which would be a very lame thing to do, since his "message" is virtually identical to that of Cruz. But from what I've seen of Carson lately, frankly, it would not surprise me. Someone speculated that he is so petty and ego driven he'll give his support to Trump, or barter a deal with the "deal maker" before he would give his support to Cruz. If he does, then I'll have to admit I was very much deceived about him being a man of character and principle.

Now let's examine these numbers more closely. You've heard me say—and I know us talk show types always like to make a case for getting it right and calling it before the other guys (hahah). I guess I'm no different—but it really doesn't matter! Fact is, like others, after me —hehe—I'm convinced Trump is a Demoncrat red herring who is purposely attempting to hijack the GOP nomination to ensure the Demoncrats remain in power—because Obama has so totally blown it for them. With Trump, you've got Obama White, with Hillary, you've got what the Dems consider to be Obama right—in either case, you've got an extension of Obamatics. More on that in a moment.

Proof? Well, as I pointed out a while back, Democrats are crossing over to vote for Trump, but it's not like it was with Reagan. The Reagan democrat was fed up with the Socialist tendencies and the Democratic parties embrace of godlessness, and cultural degradation. Many of them, like Reagan, and like my dad, by the way, felt the Democratic Party had left them, they could no longer recognize themselves in that Party—so they switched to Reagan. The Trump Dems are not fed up with the Democratic Party, perse', no doubt some of them are angry at "politics as usual," and responding to the anger Trump is stirring up, but if you are listening to the Dems who are crossing over to vote for Trump, they are total liberals—why are they crossing over and voting for Trump in these Open primaries?

Did you know that 20,000 Democrats in Massachusetts switched party affiliation to the GOP in order to participate in the primary? Why would they do this? Can't Democrats vote in the GOP primary in Massachusetts? Yes, but ONLY IF THEY WERE PREVIOUSLY UNAFFILIATED WITH ANY PARTY. These Democrats switched specifically so that they could participate in the GOP primary in Massachusetts — one of the most liberal States in the Union. You know they did not vote for Cruz. DON'T BE FOOLED by this. It is a strategy (not to say conspiracy) to get Trump nominated. Hillary wants to face TRUMP, not Cruz. Trump has SAID he and Hillary and Bill are "great friends" — he said that. Either he was lying then, or he is lying now—you pick! He met with Hillary before he announced, and I am totally convinced this is a scam—the CON MAN is running a CON on the American people. And Trump's CHUMPS and Donald's DUPES are falling for it.

It's exactly as I predicted. Trump will do well in all OPEN PRIMARIES and a close analysis will show that it will be because of crossover Dems—voting in the GOP primary.

What States has Trump lost to Cruz? Those that allow only registered Republicans to vote for a GOP candidate—with one exception, his home State of Texas.

Think about that. There are a total of 21 States that have an open primary for the GOP nomination. About half of these were part of Super Tuesday (9) and with open primaries of New Hampshire and S. Carolina out of the way, over half of the open States have voted. All the States involved in Super Tuesday were OPEN PRIMARIES except, are you ready for this? The only two States that have CLOSED PRIMARIES, meaning that only registered Republicans can vote in the GOP primary, are Alaska, and Oklahoma. Even with Sarah Palin stumping for Trump—Alaska went for Cruz over Trump. It was a narrow victory, but he won, even with their beloved Sarah, politically speaking, tramping for Trump. (I mean politically, not — you know what I mean.)

He also beat out Trump in Oklahoma by 6 points, which is respectable—but, admittedly, troubling considering how conservative Oklahoma is reputed to be. So, I'm not saying Trump has no support among conservatives—I've addressed that, and it's disturbing how many who identify as conservative are buying in to the CON—

However, my point is that consistently, Cruz beats Trump in closed primaries.

You might say, well, hey, Cruz won Texas which is an open primary State—but that's Cruz' Home State — and over all, Texas trends conservative. The point is that it would be much more difficult for crossover Democrats overwhelm the GOP ballots where there are a large number of conservatives voting. In more liberal States, where fewer conservatives are voting, it's much easier to influence the GOP primary, and that's exactly what is happening. So, for Cruz to beat Trump 44% to 27% percent in an open primary State is huge, even if it is Texas.

Now, follow closely class, because the closer you look at this the more obvious it becomes what is happening.

Many liberal Dems are crossing over to vote for Trump, because they see the handwriting on the wall for the Dems in this election cycle and consider Trump an acceptable alternative — so if they can get Trump in, then they have a democrat on both tickets—it's brilliant, as I brought out before—the wicked are "wiser in their own generation than the children of light" — they understand how the rebellious kingdoms of man operate but the children of light don't understand how God's kingdom works. So here is the game plan of the prince and power of the air. Get a Socialist liberal on both tickets—a democrat on both tickets, and then in the general election the Dems can vote for Hillary, secure that if Hillary loses they can live with a Trump presidency—THAT'S WHAT'S GOING ON, MAN, DON'T DOUBT ME ON THIS (tip-O-the hat to Rushbo)

That CONservative Trump is depending on Dem cross over votes to win the nomination. No question the guy is smart—most Con artists are.

Let's study Super Tuesday results even more deeply. Pay attention class. Notice this.

Look at the States where Trump won big. First, virtually every case, they were OPEN PRIMARIES in Blue States. (I'll address the exceptions in a moment—hold on.)

For example, the States where Trump bested Cruz by 10 or more points are Alabama, Georgia, Massachusetts, Tennessee, Vermont and Virginia. Only two of these are solid red States.

Massachusetts, Vermont, and Virginia are big liberal States (Virginia has experienced a huge migration of Californians, it's being called the New California, and has turned that State blue). Georgia is a purple State—with more blue than red, that means it leans Democrat.

It should not escape our notice that these liberal States chose Trump over Cruz by over 10 percentage points each.

The exceptions are solid red States Alabama, and Tennessee. I want to be delicate here, but let's just say there is a reason Trump hesitated to denounce proud white racist David Duke out right, but had to be pressed into it, and there is a reason David Duke endorsed Trump, and there might be a relationship between these facts and Trump's support in those States since they are known to be struggling with strong anti-black sentiment. White racism is strong in those two States.

Tennessee is considered the most white racist State in the Union, and Alabama is not far behind—the KKK are strong and active in both States. I hope you can handle some simple honesty here, and appreciate this deep analysis.

Trump pretends his ear piece malfunctioned when asked the question about Duke's endorsement, pretending he did not know about David Duke—I think he had to clear his denouncing of Duke with his "people" before he could do it safely. Notice, for example, Duke has not withdrawn his endorsement.

Now with the CON man Trump — it's not about racism, it's about POLITICS AS USUAL, you ninnies — thank you Levin!

So, Cruz has won every closed primary so far. He has come very close to Trump in every Red State open primary, except Alabama and Tennessee. Open primary BLUE States go for Trump by 10 points or more—hmmmm!

Now, one more look at the results of Super Tuesday, to appreciate why Cruz is so optimistic and why Rubio said, flatly, Trump is not going to get the nomination.

If you add Cruz and Rubio votes together and call it the conservative vote, Trump loses big—check it out!

Alabama - Trump 43, conservatism 40. Arkansas, Trump 33%, conservatism 56%. Georgia, Trump 39, conservatism 48. Massachusetts, Trump 49, conservatism 28. Tennessee, Trump 39, conservatism 46. Vermont, Trump 33, conservatism 29. Virginia, trump 35, conservatism 49.

In other words, Trump barely beat conservatism in Alabama, and unsurprisingly trumped conservatism in liberal Massachusetts, and Vermont. And it's almost certain this is in large part because of Democrat cross over voters.

It's going to take a little more time for this to shake out—but let's hope Cruz and Rubio figure out what has to be done here sooner rather than later.

Sunday night is going to be a blistering expose on exactly what has to happen among God fearing patriots to win this battle for the helm of this ship of state! Hold on through the break. I'll be right back.

Segment.02 Hello. Welcome back! I'm Jerry Scheidbach, pastor at the Lighthouse, your brain masseur, and Paul Revere's lantern lighter, lighting the lamps in the church belfry arch, signaling the enemy is on the march, an enemy that would steal from us our liberty.

Okay, the eleventh GOP debate should have settled it for every conservative. If what you want for President is a stylish quip master—vote Rubio. (That yoga quip—was clever—and he dances around big bully Trump like Cassius Clay danced around big Joe.) If you want a bombastic blow-hard, bully con artist—vote Trump. If you want someone who would make a great Secretary of State, who has a good grasp on foreign affairs but weak on Constitutional issues and domestic concerns—vote Kasich. But hands down, I agree with Rush on this one, hands down, on substance, on broad knowledge covering every issue, with detailed plans that there is no question will get the job done on every concern we face today — It's CRUZ, baby, It's CRUZ all the way.

Everything Trump supporters think they are getting with Trump, they will get with Cruz. Trump is conning them, and if he becomes President, you are going to hear weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth — just like the 5,000 people he conned with his Trump University con.

Wow, where to start. I've already addressed Trump's dismissal of Cruz' claim that he is the only one who can beat Trump. It's typical Trumping — very superficial, but easy for Donald's dupes to follow. I won 10, he won four or five. Go back over my first segment, where I blow that out of the water.

And Rubio gets credit for setting Trump's record straight—he brought out the fact that two-thirds of the people who cast a vote in the primaries thus far have voted against TRUMP. He is winning ONLY BECAUSE the conservative vote is divided between Cruz, and Rubio, mostly, and then Kassich and Carson, and the rest that are still on the ballots but have dropped out.

He also gets points for pointing out the truth that Trump is not a conservative—in fact, Trump is the biggest CONservative ever.

I was also heartened to see Rubio reach out to Ted a few times and vice versa.

I don't have time to go over it in detail, but listen, Cruz knocked it out of the park every time he was given a policy question, and, to change my metaphor, he actually did a great job at tagging Trump's glass jaw with some great jabs followed up by a few hooks and upper cuts along the way too.

The glass jaw of Trump (his record) is cracked, and some more of this, it'll shatter.

Chris Wallace asked Cruz to explain how his plan to abolish the IRS and implement a flat tax will work logistically. That is, for example, who will collect the taxes, who will make certain taxes are paid properly, and so on?

Cruz answered—no glittering generalities like, Trump, "oh, it'll work, me tell you, and hey, they'll pay—it'll be great, and my poll numbers are way above these other guys, especially above that little guy over there." (Anyone still supporting Trump after he dropped his pants and showed his arrogant dairy air to the world, there is only one thing to say, your one of Donald's Dupes, you are one of Trump's Chumps—that's all I can say. Anyway, Cruz answered the question.

He told us he has rolled out his tax plan in precise detail. And he has. It's on his site, tedcruz.org. He said Americans will be able to file their taxes on a postcard. He said "if you want to actually see the postcard, see all the details, you can find them on our Web site. It's tedcruz.org."

He said, "When he we get rid of all the corporate welfare, all the subsidies, all the carve-outs in the IRS code, it dramatically simplifies it. And under Obama, the IRS has become so corrupt and so politicized we need to abolish it all together." As for how will taxes be collected and tax laws enforced, and so on, he said "there will still be an office in the Treasury Department to receive the postcards but it will be dramatically simpler."

And then he took it to Trump. And he weighed in with substance on an exchange that went on earlier between Wallace, Trump, and Rubio. Cruz said, "In between all of the insults, let me point out the specificity that was lacking. It's very easy to say, 'Let's cut waste, fraud, and abuse.' I've rolled out a detailed plan to cut $500 billion in federal spending, specifying exactly what I would cut." And he has, by the way!

And I thought his assessment of Trump supporters, that is the conservatives who are supporting Trump, was spot on:

"I understand the folks who are supporting Donald right now. You're angry. You're angry at Washington, and he uses angry rhetoric. But for 40 years, Donald has been part of the corruption in Washington that you're angry about." [HALLELUJAH]

(APPLAUSE)

And he went on to say, "You're not going to stop the corruption in Washington by supporting someone who has supported liberal Democrats for four decades, from Jimmy Carter to John Kerry to Hillary Clinton. You're not going to stop the corruption and the cronyism by supporting someone who has used government power for private gain. Instead, we need a president who stands with the American people."

And, folks, this is a very important point. His RECORD, his RECORD his RECORD. And Trump, of course, comes off with this "All of a sudden, I hear for 40 years I've been involved in Washington." And then he goes on about supporting politicians on all sides, Democrats, Republicans, liberals, conservatives. And he did this because, he said, "I wasn't a politician..." Without saying it, he says he supported these politicians for business interests—he was buying favor with the politicians—he admits this, and yet his supporters are okay with that. But later in the debate, Cruz does a masterful job of coming back at this and laying solid blow upon the glass jaw of Trump:

When Kelly directed the question to immigration, later on, and put the question before Cruz in such a way as would embarrass him.
We all know Cruz stood with Senator Jeff Sessions in his fight against illegal immigration and amnesty—yet Sessions has endorsed Trump, so Kelly asks, "If voters want Jeff Sessions-style immigration policies, isn't their choice rather clear?"

I loved Cruz's response—her implication was clear, Trump would be their choice—but his response was great—"Yes, their choice is very clear. IF YOU LOOK TO THE ACTUAL RECORD—" [HALLELUJAH]

And then he laid in on Trump—and anyone who has any sense at all should have seen that he had Trump in the corner actually ducking into the blows.

Cruz says, "Donald mentioned a moment ago that he was just doing business when he was writing checks to liberal Democrats.
But that's not, in fact, the checks he was writing." He continued,
"Listen, we could all understand if you write a check to a city commission because you're looking for a zoning waiver on building a building. That may be corrupt, but you could understand real estate developers doing that." Wow, good shot, Cruz. Excellent point—that is CORRUPTION. Buying politicians to gain favors for deals is CORRUPTION. Trump answers later and says he is involved in, what was it, 120 deals overseas—oh, really? He quickly throws in, "I hope to be able to stop very soon and let my children handle it" ARE YOU LISTENING? Great! His kids will have the PRESIDENT in their POCKET while doing their international DEALS—Donald buys politicians for business—and you don't think he is buying the Presidency?

Cruz went on! Explaining that Donald no doubt practiced corruption politics—but that his contributions show a pattern of support for Democrats that are clearly for political interests and not merely personal, or professional interests. He gives examples, "Donald Trump supported Jimmy Carter over Ronald Reagan. Donald supported John Kerry over George W. Bush. If you don't like Obamacare, Donald Trump funded Harry Reid and Nancy Pelosi taking over Congress to pass Obamacare."

And here is another question for ducking Donald—if you bought these politicians for personal and professional gain—UH, WHAT DID THESE PEOPLE DO FOR YOU! I think we have a right to KNOW!

Cruz continued: "On immigration, if you don't like amnesty, if you don't like the Gang of Eight, Donald Trump funded five of the eight members of the Gang of Eight $50,000." So if he did not like their politics, but wanted to establish some favors — what were the favors he hoped to get?

Then he took it to the glass jaw again: "And let's talk about this election. The choice Republican primary voters are making is who is best prepared to stand up to Hillary Clinton and beat Hillary Clinton. Donald Trump has written checks to Hillary Clinton not once, not twice, not three times. Ten times. And four of those checks were not to her Senate campaign. It wasn't that she was the New York senator and it was a cost of doing business. It was to her presidential campaign.

Donald Trump in 2008 wrote four checks to elect Hillary Clinton as president."

Cruz then addresses the Donald directly: So I'd like to ask Donald, why did you write checks to Hillary Clinton to be president in 2008? It wasn't for business. And how can you stand on a debate stage now with her and say you don't think she should be president?"

Everything is Awesome! — wow! And the Donald comes back with "Actually, it was for business. It was. It was. It was for business." Unbelievable! On the national stage the candidate many of you are all excited about supporting, admitted to BUYING POLITICAL FAVORS FOR PERSONAL AND PROFESSIONAL GAIN. And then, here is where he tells us he is, right now, engaged in, and it was 120 deals outside of the United States, and that he intends to turn this over to his kids while he is President. He has openly admitted that he buys politicians for professional favors to help his business interests—think about this. His kids are going to have their dad in the office of president, a dad who has admitted that he buys politicians for professional favors to help his business interests.

And then, on the issue of immigration, did you hear Trump admit his big talk about immigration is a negotiating trick of advancing a high number expecting to negotiate it down? I'm short on time, but get the transcript or listen again if you missed it. It's right there.

I definitely join those calling for Trump to release the audio recordings of his "off the record" talk with the New York Times. Even on the debate stage he essentially admitted that yeah, he "might" have said something like, "you've got to deal" — wake up!

This man obviously has no moral center or any ideological center for that matter.

It's Obama all over again. Obama told us who he is in his book, Dreams From My Father — Trump has told us who he is in his book, The Art of the Deal. And he is playing America by the book. In that book he praised a tactic in negotiating in which you play to people's fantasies—get them emotionally identifying with you, and then you can sell them anything.

And right then, HE ACTUALLY DOES IT ON STAGE WITH THIS QUESTION. Watch what he does, and then I'll have to close. But watch this.

Kelly presses him on this but about whether Trump is not actually following his own advice in his book and "playing to people's fantasies" as a tactic to get them on his side. Watch how he answers this—watch how he turns it around, goes straight to his hot button issue and plays to the fantasies of his support base:

"I'm not playing to anybody's fantasies, I'm playing to the fact that our country is in trouble, that we have a tremendous problem with crime. The border is a disaster, it's like a piece of Swiss cheese. We're going to stop it, we're going to stop people from coming into our country illegally. We're going to stop it."

And the crowd erupts in applause and cheering, why, because WE ALL AGREE WITH HIS ASSESSMENT OF THE PROBLEM—perfect example! He put on display exactly what's going on with his campaign. The guy is a CON ARTIST — and you are being conned, America. Wake up. Because the fact is, Cruz has committed himself to do something about every one of these things, BUT HE ACTUALLY HAS A PLAN TO GET IT DONE.

Now, I actually did not get to my point this time—so I'll address it Sunday night at the Lighthouse—He That Sitteth In The Heaven's Shall Laugh—[laughter]—look, we have fasted and prayed that God would raise up a godly man who would tell the truth and do what is right for the country. Cruz is God's answer to that prayer. So, if we end up with Trump, it's no one's fault but our own. Let's talk about it, Sunday night, 6 pm, at the Lighthouse.

I have lit the lamps in the Church belfry arch and now you let me know if you see them. You say LIGHTS ON if you see the LIGHTS ARE ON and you will ride like Revere and spread the warning, (essentially, it means you agree with what I'm saying) or you say LIGHTS ARE OFF — which means you reject what I'm saying and disagree strongly with me. So, what will it be today, lights on, or lights off?
